ABSTRACT

With the emergence of adult education as a separate and distinct area of professionalism, there has been recognized a need for some kind of publication to guide the uninitiated to the sources of information that they need. The directory was developed with this objective in mind. The document consists of seven sections of adult education information sources: (1) national adult education associations--containing a brief description of the intent and services of each organization; (2) adult education periodicals--outlining the scope of each periodical; (3) information systems--listing the locations of the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) microfiche collections, the 16 ERIC Clearinghouses, and other information systems, with a brief outline of their scope; (4) information search services--listing computer search services using the ERIC data base; (5) other resources--a list of individuals and agencies that may be of assistance in information gathering; (6) graduate programs in adult education--sources of information and relevant documents are cited; and (7) adult education documents--several adult education "classics" are noted together with a list of adult education publications. INTRODUCTION

The field of adult education, so rich in the diversity of the clientele it serves and so varied in its institutional sponsorship, poses problems for anyone who is unfamiliar with it. People from other fields and disciplines as well as new graduate students in adult education do not know where to turn to obtain help in tracking down available resources.

For a long time, particularly as the field has been emerging as a separate and distinct area of professionalization, there has been a recognized need for some kind of roadmap to guide the uninitiated to the sources of information they needed. This publication is an effort to begin to meet that need. The information it presents is ephemeral in nature and will need to be updated and expanded regularly.

Adult education can be defined in many ways--no one way being satisfactory to everyone. Instead of offering yet another definition of adult education and thereby contributing to the confusion that already exists, our approach will be to describe what adult education embraces.

Adult education is an umbrella term covering education and training of adults and out-of-school youths in varied institutions and agencies such as business and industry, churches and synagogues, the military, governmental and community organizations, as well as schools and universities.

The coverage of adult education encompasses a wide range of education and training, including the following core areas:

1. The intellectual, psychological, social, and physical characteristics of adults which affect their learning processes;
2. the career and personal interests and motives which influence the educational needs of adults;
3. the methods of instruction, independent study, program planning, and evaluation which are effective in the education and training of adults;
4. the system of institutional arrangements for providing adult education and training, as well as the economic, social and philosophical factors which govern the operation and growth of this system.

It is useful for adult educators to see their work in relation to the work of other agencies and groups. Such pooling of information leads to many forms of communication and cooperation. These informed networks also serve as a cross-cultural influence so important, yet so often overlooked.

The nature and scope of this general guide do not allow a detailed inclusion of local educational information centers and services, even if we knew them all. Look around in your locality, state or region to see whether there is a service available to you.

Experience in adult education shows that some of the most effective assistance one can give to anyone searching for the best practices and research is to direct that person to human resources. Up until the establishment of the ERIC (Educational Resources Information Center) Clearinghouse on Adult Education in 1967, there was no one central location to serve the broad field of adult education. Individual organizations and agencies did perform, as they still do, some limited clearinghouse functions for their members or consultants. These are still good sources for help in locating information. That is why this publication includes a listing of national adult education associations, of professors of adult education who are members of the Adult Education Association Commission of Professors, and some state agencies.

One of the richest sources of information both regarding practice and research in adult education is to be found in the numerous periodicals--journals, magazines, newsletters and bulletins. We have listed the major journals and a handful of newsletters which are more in the nature of journals in content, making no pretense at being all inclusive. We have unabashedly made value judgments as to what might be of value to most adult educators. Our criteria for these selections were developed and refined through seven years of intimate handling of literally hundreds of such publications on a regular basis. At one point, we had identified more than 400 newsletters alone in adult education published on a somewhat regular basis.

The ERIC system must be one of the better things which has come out of the U. S. Office of Education, and is now under the aegis of the National Institute of Education. Even though the ERIC Clearinghouse on Adult Education has been consolidated with The Vocational and Technical Education Clearinghouse to form a new Career Education Clearinghouse, the coverage of adult education has been assured under the able direction of Dr. David V. Tiedeman. His deep interest and concern for adult education will insure continued collection of materials for input into the ERIC system in proportion to available financial support.

Through the ERIC system, adult educators have access to research and research-related documents as well as periodic literature. Research in Education (Resources in Education as of January, 1975) and Current Index to Journals in Education are the principal monthly catalogs of ERIC, carrying abstracts and annotations of adult education literature as well as the other fields of education covered by the various clearinghouses. In addition, most documents are available in both microfiche and hard copy reproductions through the ERIC Document Reproduction System.

An outgrowth of ERIC and similar information systems has been a new industry performing information searches using computerized data. Some of these are included in this guide, but they are proliferating constantly so that they will be more readily available and capable of various services to a wider audience of users.

Graduate programs in adult education have increased dramatically in recent years as many colleges and universities are realistically facing up to meet, what is becoming readily apparent, an upswing of adult education. New students entering graduate programs in adult education often need an overview of the field to better understand what it includes and how it functions. Hopefully, they will find in this guide an introduction to what is an exciting and challenging field. They may be happily surprised to discover that the field is rich in resources which are not readily perceived until one begins to explore some of the avenues suggested here.

A decision was made not to prepare an extensive bibliography of basic books. The reason behind this was the diversity of the field which no simple bibliography could adequately begin to cover. Instead, we have decided to include a reference to an existing bibliography by Russell Kleis which is as good as any existing general bibliography.

We did include, however, a complete listing of all the ERIC/AE and CE publications generated on a variety of topics and in several formats. Especially of interest and usefulness are the literature reviews and compilations of research and investigations, as well as dissertations. These latter form a rather comprehensive collection of records serving an encyclopedic function for the researcher.

The users of this guide will surely discover that it is lacking in some ways. Their suggestions as to what else might be included in updates of this publication will be helpful and appreciated especially by others who will turn to it for help.

USAF INSTRUCTORS JOURNAL

Quarterly

The objectives of this journal are to stimulate the Air Force instructor toward self improvement, to provide a vehicle for more experienced instructors to disseminate knowledge about instruction, and to keep instructors current in the rapid changes in education and training. It is available from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20401. Subscription rates: $1.50 annually (Domestic); $.50 additional for foreign mailing, and $.40 a single copy. Back issues cannot be furnished.

WEA REVIEW

Semiannually

The W.E.A. Review, formerly the W.E.A. News, reports on activities of the New Zealand Workers' Educational Association, the voluntary organization for adult education. It is published twice a year and is complimentary.

WOMEN TODAY

Biweekly

This biweekly newsletter includes brief items of current interest on such topics as women's organizations, day care centers, legal cases relating to women's rights and the employment of women, training and continuing programs for women, women's earnings, and volunteer work. Several brief book reviews, letters to the editor, and announcements of meetings also appear. It is available from Today Publication & News Service, National Press Building, Washington, D.C. 20004. Subscription rate: in the U.S. $15.00 annually, $25.00 for 2 years; outside the U.S., $18.00 annually, $31.00 for 2 years.

SECTION III

INFORMATION SYSTEMS

ERIC: Educational Resources Information Center

ERIC is a national information system designed and developed by the U. S. Office of Education and operated by the National Institute of Education. It provides ready access to descriptions of exemplary programs, research and development efforts, and related information. Through a network of specialized centers (clearinghouses), each of which is responsible for a particular area of education, current significant information relevant to education is monitored, acquired, evaluated, abstracted, indexed, and listed in ERIC reference publications. Through the ERIC reference publications, access is gained to reports of innovative programs, conference proceedings, bibliographies, professional papers, curriculum-related materials, and reports of the most significant efforts in educational research and development, regardless of where they were first reported.

In addition, each clearinghouse produces newsletters, bulletins, interpretative summaries, research reviews, and bibliographies.

To locate information on a particular educational subject, ERIC publications can be used. One, Research in Education (RIE), is a monthly abstract journal announcing recently completed research reports, descriptions of programs, curriculum materials, and other documents of educational significance indexed by subject, author, and institution. A second publication, Current Index to Journals in Education (CIJE), is a monthly guide to the periodical literature, covering more than 500 major educational and education-related publications. It includes a main entry section with annotations, and is indexed by subject and author. A semiannual and an annual cumulative index are available for both publications.

A third publication, Thesaurus of ERIC Descriptors, lists the structured vocabulary of approximately 7,200 educational terms called descriptors which are used to index and enter documents into the ERIC system and through which entry is made to the subject indexes of the two aforementioned publications.

Two other ERIC publications are of particular interest for special subject searches: Office of Education Research Reports, 1956-1965 for reports received before publication of RIE; and Pacesetters in Innovation, presenting information on Projects to Advance Creativity in Education (PACE). Volumes for fiscal years 1966-1968 include resumes of title III (ESEA) projects. The volume for 1969 includes resumes of continuing title III projects and newly funded projects.

In addition to these ERIC publications, most of the documents cited in RIE are available from ERIC in microfiche form. A number of organizations have placed orders with the ERIC Document Reproduction Service to receive the entire ERIC microfiche output on a regular and continuous basis. The number of organizations on a standing order basis changes periodically and not all of the current ones are open to the public. They are listed here, however, as one of the sources of ERIC materials.

This list is being updated by an ERIC publication, DIRECTORY OF ERIC MICROFICHE STANDING ORDER CUSTOMERS, which will be available in September, 1974.

Another ERIC publication which researchers will find helpful is A SURVEY OF ERIC DATA BASE SEARCH SERVICES, a list of locations where searches of the ERIC data base may be conducted. The publication is also scheduled for release in September, 1974.

Currently there are sixteen clearinghouses preparing materials for inclusion in RIE and CIJE. The clearinghouse in career education (ERIC/CICE) is responsible for materials in adult and continuing education (formal and informal) in family, leisure, citizen, organizational, and retirement roles. It is also responsible for materials dealing with career education at all levels, both formal and informal, encompassing attitudes, self-knowledge, decision-making skills, general occupational knowledge, and specific vocational and occupational skills. Its third area of concern is in vocational and technical education, including new sub-professional fields, industrial arts, and vocational rehabilitation for the handicapped.

In conducting literature searches in adult education, certain descriptors are commonly used by ERIC/CICE. A list of such descriptors is presented here to suggest avenues of approach in researching particular adult education topics.

TRAINING ABSTRACTS SERVICE, NOTES FOR USERS. Great Britain Ministry of Labour Training Dept., London, England.

A Training Abstracts Service has been introduced by the British Ministry of Labour to reduce to manageable proportions the relevant published material on techniques, methods, new equipment and other matters pertinent to industrial training. The service provides wide coverage of British sources and some other English language material, but no systematic coverage of developments overseas. It includes abstracts, summaries, and annotated biliographies appearing in periodicals, journals, and abstract services. Abstracts are printed on standard six by four inch cards, so they may be filed according to a classification scheme. In addition to its own ten main schedules, it uses major groups in the summary of the International Standard Classification of Occupations, Universal Decimal Classification numbers for subject matter and Standard Industrial Classification numbers for 24 orders of industry. The pamphlet contains a list of the 62 periodicals scanned, a list of the ten organizations which have granted permission to reproduce their abstracts, and the classification schedules with their nine-page alphabetical index. This document is available from the Ministry of Labour, Training Dept. (TD2), 168 Regent St., London W1, England.

U. S. GOVERNMENT RESEARCH & DEVELOPMENT REPORTS. Clearinghouse for Federal Scientific and Technical Information, Springfield, VA.

A semi-monthly abstract journal announces reports of U. S. government-sponsored research and development released to the public through the Clearinghouse by the Atomic Energy Commission, Department of Defense, National Aeronautics & Space Administration, and other U. S. government departments and agencies; U. S. government-sponsored translations; and some foreign reports written in English. Reports are announced in 22 subject categories and include military training, human factors, training devices, evaluation of training, learning, cross cultural training, leadership, management development, job analysis, industrial training, urban planning, and community development. They are indexed by subject, personal author, corporate author, contract/grant number, and accession/report number. The index is sold on subscription at $22 a year ($27.50 foreign) or single copy at $3. Order from the Clearinghouse for Federal Scientific and Technical Information, Springfield, VA 22151. Quarterly and annual cumulations are also published. These are priced separately and announced by the Clearinghouse when available.

SECTION IV

INFORMATION SEARCH SERVICES

In conducting information searches, there are various agencies which serve as helpful sources. A document which is of particular value in locating sources which search the ERIC system is David H. Miller's Guide to State Information Resources. The Guide lists the names and addresses of selected state information dissemination agencies and the locations and comprehensiveness of ERIC microfiche collections. It also cites whether or not manual and/or computer searches of the ERIC document base are provided, determines the availability of microfiche readers and related equipment, and specifies the accessibility to the public of each agency's library collection. The Guide is available in ERIC as ED 083 477.

Other computer search facilities which have the ERIC data base (RIE and CIJE) are:

DATRIX is a computer search service of all the doctoral dissertations listed in Dissertation Abstracts for any designated area of interest or study. The service produces a bibliography containing the complete title of the dissertation, the author's name, the university at which the dissertation was accepted, date of publication, and the page and volume of Dissertation Abstracts where the dissertation is listed. Prices of microfiche or hard copies of the dissertation are included.

Almost all of the search services cited charge a fee ranging from $5.00 to $25.00.

SECTION V

OTHER RESOURCES

In addition to the resources covered up to this point, there are individuals and agencies who may be of assistance. For example, you might turn to the librarian in the local public library, community college, four-year college, or university.

Sometimes, there are adult education specialists, such as trainers, in larger businesses and industries who may be of assistance in advising and locating other useful and relevant resources you may need. Also, directors of local adult education centers and institutes often can be helpful.

Many states have an individual within the department of education who can be of great help in tracking down materials and other kinds of information. The lists which follow name some of these people.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada

There are several documents pertaining to graduate programs in adult education which are of particular interest. Some of these are cited here, with author, title, source, publication date, and an abstract and ERIC number included.

Adult Education Dissertation Abstracts, 3 vols. Published by the the Adult Education Association of the USA.

One volume covers dissertations from 1935-1962 (ED 069 967), another from 1963-1967 (ED 044 537), and the third from 1968-1969 (ED 052 450). Each bibliography contains citations, abstracts and ordering information. Studies are classified by broad subject headings used in the former ERIC Clearinghouse on Adult Education.

A Directory and Analysis of Degree Programs for Preparing Professional Adult Educators in the United States by William S. Griffith and Gilles H. Cloutier. University of Chicago, Department of Education. January, 1972, ED 058 540.

This study examines the current and planned status of opportunities of training for adult educators in the United States through programs especially designed to meet their needs, as indicated by the degree programs and curricula offered and projected by institutions of higher education. Following the Introduction (Chapter I), Chapter II presents a Review of the Literature on Training Opportunities for Adult Educators. Chapter III consists of a description of the procedures used in identifying the sample and in collecting the data. Chapter IV is a summary and listing of the data collected. Chapter V includes a comparison of the present and previous studies and also sets forth the authors' conclusions and interpretations of the data, as well as their suggestions for subsequent studies and procedures for maintaining current information on the degree training opportunities for adult educators. The instruments used in the data collection are included in Appendix A. The names and addresses of the directors of all programs from which completed questionnaires were received are shown in Appendix B. Appendix C gives the names and addresses of four persons who were admitted to membership in the Commission of the Professors of Adult Education and who are directors of additional programs not reported in the survey. A bibliography is provided, and 57 tables accompany the textual material.

A Survey of Graduate Programs in Adult Education in the United States and Canada by Roy J. Ingham, B. G. Munro, and Romeo M. Massey. Florida State University, Department of Adult Education, Tallahassee. October, 1970, ED 044 571.

Second in a series, this survey was designed to provide information about some aspects of graduate study in adult education in the United States and Canada. It differs from the first, dated July, 1968, in that only data likely to change appreciably in one year were included. Some of the major changes between the last and present reports are: full-time faculty increased from 55 to 88; part-time faculty decreased from 82 to 78, but 96 faculty from other departments were participating in the adult education program; full-time doctoral students increased from 330 to 387; part-time doctoral students increased from 369 to 526. At the masters level, full-time students increased from 179 to 259; and part-time students increased from 556 to 753; a decline took place in the number of students engaged in writing their dissertation. The number of assistantships increased from 100 to 137; fellowships, from 22 to 44; and internships, from 55 to 77. (The questionnaire is included in the appendix.)

Graduate Research in Adult Education edited by Huey B. Long and Roger Hiemstra. Adult Education Association of the USA. 1974. (Not in ERIC)

The nine-chapter book discusses the development of perspective, survey research, historical research, experimental research, and field research and grounded theory. Also discussed are the central issues on the methodology of scientific research as applied to adult education, trends in adult education graduate research, the need for a new approach to graduate research, and the practice of graduate research.

Directory of Libraries and Information Centres in the Field of Literacy, International Institute for Adult Literacy Methods, Teheran, Iran. 1973, ED 089 092.

The directory provides the following information for literacy centers in 24 countries: name of center, address, name of parent institution, supported by, and the type of center. It also includes the total number of personnel (full-time, part-time, professional, non-professional); objectives of the center; and proportion of the total collection devoted to literacy, adult education, related fields, and other. Other items include the classification system, material arrangement on the shelf, the total number of books and documents in the field, and the total number of periodicals. Information is further provided regarding the type and name of publications, their scope, and whether or not publications are offered in exchange. Current activities and services are also cited. An index of libraries is included.

SECTION VII

ADULT EDUCATION DOCUMENTS

Instead of listing a comprehensive catalogue of documents here, only several "classics" are noted. There is reference to a comprehensive bibliography prepared by Russell Kleis. This latter bibliography is quite adequate for most purposes.

A list of publications prepared by ERIC/AE and ERIC/CICE is added for the sake of recording them in one place as a handy reference. Most of these documents are available from The ERIC Document Reproduction Service in microfiche and hard copy reproductions.

Bibliography on Continuing Education, by Russell J. Kleis. Office of Studies in Continuing Education, Michigan State University, East Lansing. 1972. ED 078 242

This is the fifth in a series of updatings of this bibliography. Nearly three-fourths of the titles have appeared since the original list was prepared seven years ago. The bibliography is organized in 12 sections. Eight of the sections consist principally of books, each of which relates to a course, seminar, or institute of the program of Graduate Studies in Continuing Education at Michigan State University. One section includes research and bibliographical listings; another lists series publications of special interest to students of continuing education; and the final section includes periodicals and special publications. The title of the 12 sections are: General Overview of Continuing Education; Adult Learning and Methods in Continuing Education; Social Foundations and Social Significance; Continuing Education in Colleges and Universities; Continuing Education in Local Communities; Adult Basic Education; Continuing Education for Special Groups; Comparative Studies in Continuing Education; Physical Environment for Learning; Bibliographies, Literature Reviews and Research in Continuing Education; Special Series Publications; and Periodicals.

Terminology about Adult Continuing Education: A Preliminary Structure and a Suggested Development Process, by Victor C. Gideon, A. Patricia King, Harry M. Runyan, Michael R. Sutherland. National Center for Educational Statistics (DHEW/OE), Washington, D. C. 1971. ED 065 761

This feasibility study of terminology, the first step in attempting to resolve some of the communication problems in adult/continuing education, describes the process used and reflects the current conditions in this area. In researching terminology use, attention was directed to current concepts; the extent of agreement concerning terms and definitions currently in use; the effectiveness of various cooperative processes, with emphasis on the Delphi process; and related factors. Part I focuses on background information and an overview of the project. Part II describes the participants, the context, and the objectives, along with a detailed history of the developmental process and of the various encounters and interrelationships that occurred. Part III presents a conceptual model of adult/continuing education. In the conceptual model, the educational process is presented as a dynamic system consisting of four basic processes--appraisal, facilitation, participation, and learning. Four basic recommendations are offered to facilitate the continuing work on the development of a terminology handbook. They are: expand the interaction between the Office of Education and professional practitioners; proceed with the project, use the Delphi process; and consider future work within the context of the development of an integrated data system for the whole education field.

Volunteers for Learning, A Study of the Educational Pursuits of American Adults, by John W. Johnstone and Ramon J. Rivera. National Opinion Research Center, Chicago, IL. 1965

Contemporary adult education in the United States today is examined by means of a national sample survey. In this monograph, adult learning is approached from a social-psychological vantage point--the needs, motives, and satisfactions which impel adults to seek to learn some subject. The organization of adult education is considered only insofar as such organization facilitates or hinders individuals in the pursuit of learning. The extent and nature of adult participation in continuing education are reviewed, the people who engage in these pursuits are identified, the situations, circumstances, and personal goals which influence people to become involved in educational endeavors are reconstructed, the national climate of opinion regarding education for adults is looked at, and to a lesser degree, the range of facilities available for the instruction of the adult population is investigated. (This document is available from Aldine Publishing Co., Chicago, IL.)

An Overview of Adult Education Research, by Edmund deS. Brunner and others. Adult Education Association. 1959. ED 022 073

More than 4,000 titles were scrutinized (600 of which are cited) in preparing this report of research in liberal, nonvocational adult education at an early stage in the development of a new discipline within the total universe of education, wide differences were noted in the amount and quality of research in the various disciplines of the field and in the applicability to them of research and theory derived from the social science disciplines. The following aspects of adult education were examined--adult learning, motivation to learn, attitudes, adult interests, participants, organization and administration, programs and program planning, methods and techniques, use of discussion, lay and professional leaders and leadership, group research, the community and its institutions, and problems of evaluation research. (The document is available from Adult Education Association of the USA, 1225 19th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036.)

Adult Education: Outlines of an Emerging Field of University Study, by Gale Jensen, ed., and other editors. Adult Education Association. 1964.

This book is concerned with the development of a more complete description of the field and body of knowledge of adult and continuing education required for graduate training programs for adult educators. The sixteen chapters, written by university professors of adult education, are in four sections--(1) a delineation and description of the milieu in which a graduate program for the training of adult educators is emerging, (2) adult education and other disciplines, (3) theories about determining objectives for adult education activities, programs and management of the learning situation, and (4) implications for programs of graduate study in adult education. The commission of the Professors of Adult Education is explained in an appendix.

Handbook of Adult Education, by Robert M. Smith, ed., and other editors. Adult Education Association. 1970. ED 049 399

The 1970 edition of this handbook is an attempt to reflect the totality of adult education--its background, function, objectives, and roles--as a discipline and in American society. It is divided into three parts. Part I discusses forms, functions, and the future of adult education--social setting and international dimension for adult education, program development and evaluation, information resources and services, technology, research and theory, philosophical consideration and adult educators. Part II contains papers on institutional forms and arrangements in adult education--colleges and universities, public schools, libraries and museums, cooperative extension service, armed forces, labor unions, business and industry, health and welfare agencies, religious institutions. The third part outlines program areas--curriculum and content, adult basic education, education for the family, social and public responsibilities, vocational and technical education, continuing and self fulfillment education. Three appendixes present a directory of participating organizations of the Committee of Adult Education Organizations, information sources in adult education, and the contents of past handbooks. (The document is available from The Macmillan Company, 866 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10022.)

Public Continuing and Adult Education Almanac, annual publication.

This annual directory presents statistics of Public Continuing and Adult Education, a list of graduate programs, and alphabetical and geographical listings of NAPCAE members. It is available from the National Association for Public Continuing and Adult Education, 1201 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036.

The New York Times Guide to Continuing Education in America, by Frances Coombs Thomson, ed. Prepared by The College Entrance Examination Board. Quadrangle Books, NY. 1972.

The book is a guide to organizations and institutions for adult students continuing their education. Only accredited institutions were invited to participate by providing information on their continuing education programs and classroom and correspondence course offerings. Responses from 2,281 institutions are included in the Guide. Six hundred eighty pages are devoted to two sections: institutions offering classroom courses that are open to adults

(628 pages), and institutions offering correspondence courses (48 pages). The former section is subdivided alphabetically by state and institution. The latter section is arranged alphabetically according to the name of the institution. In addition to the two main sections, the Guide includes a glossary of terms used in the book, a ten-page bibliography of other books of interest to adult students, and a list of organizations active in continuing education. There is also a section explaining how adults can earn a high school equivalency certificate or college credits by taking certain tests and how they can study by correspondence to their best advantage. Accreditation is explained and the accrediting associations and agencies recognized by the United States Office of Education in April, 1970, are listed. An index of institutional descriptions comprises the Guide's concluding pages.
